

Fire Damages Kalamazoo Church

The Fourth Reformed Church of Kalamazoo, Michigan, was heavily damaged by a fire which broke out during the morning worship service on February 6.

Most of the damage was to the roof, ceiling and attic area of the church. Falling debris damaged the interior of the church, and the basement area was water-soaked. The pipe organ was also extensively damaged. The full extent of the loss has not yet been determined.

Said the Rev. Louis Branning, pastor, "I just got through a few sentences of my message when a man in the congregation raised his hand and said, 'Pastor, I think there's a fire up there.' Looking up, I saw flames a short distance from a light bulb, and immediately dismissed the congregation." All of the 200 worshipers present escaped without injury.

The congregation is holding Sunday services in the Kalamazoo Christian High School, 2121 Stadium Drive, and the midweek programs will be held in the former parsonage adjacent to the church. The broadcast of the Sunday evening services, begun in 1952, will also be continued.

Forty years ago the church suffered a fire which destroyed much of the building, and the church was rebuilt at the same location.
